

ABSTRACT

A mapping catheter is described to map electric field activity in a heart chamber. The catheter has a first grouping of electrodes positioned so that they are not in contact with the patient's heart. The catheter also having a second set of electrodes positioned in contact with the patient's heart.